This year, on June 1, the City also celebrates Intergenerational Day, which is a celebration of older and younger generations coming together for a greater understanding of what we have in common and what makes us unique. Doors Open Ottawa offers the ideal way for people of different generations to spend time together, learning about each other and our great inclusive city.

The first weekend of June is one of the busiest in Ottawa, with thousands of residents and visitors enjoying the beginning of the summer months and seasonal activities and festivals.

This year, June 1 to 2 marks the 17th edition of Doors Open Ottawa; a weekend on which we have the opportunity to explore more than 130 of Ottawa's most interesting places, including 10 new sites, free of charge. Come learn about Ottawa's rich architectural and cultural heritage while getting behind-the-scenes access to some of the city's most treasured landmarks!

I am particularly excited about some new additions to this year's list of participants: the National Arts Centre, Health Canada's Product Safety Laboratory, the Official Residence of the Embassy of Denmark and the Algonquin College DARE District.
